There's an earthquake in Albania, Haiti, Pakistan or some other part of the world that's difficult to get to. You watch the news reporter describing the scene on TV. He says International Rescue Teams arrived the evening before. You can see them at work in the background. This group of volunteers responds to international disasters of different kinds, both man-made and natural. They're equipped and ready to go to any emergency within 24 hours. They have to be very efficient.
